Battery victim faces surgery

ROBYN SIDERSKY
Contributing Writer

A 25-year-old UCF business major and Air Force veteran is scheduled to undergo reconstructive surgery today to repair facial bone damage resulting when he was beaten early Saturday in a parking lot at The Village at Alafaya Club.

"The whole bone structure around my eye is messed up," said the victim, Doug Wilgo. "I can't even sleep flat on my back."

Police found Wilgo lying in a pool of blood early Saturday after being battered by at least six men, some of whom were in costume. Several witnesses said they saw the men beating Wilgo and stomping on his head after he fell.

"They were pounding, punching and kicking my head in — stomping on me," Wilgo said.

Although at least six men were involved in the beating, only two, Matthew Lilly, 18, of West Palm Beach, and Adam Burgoon, 19, of Palm Beach Gardens, were arrested and charged with misdemeanor battery.

Wilgo was taken by ambulance to Orlando Regional Medical Center, where he was

More than 'just the victim'

Loved ones reeling from student's fatal stabbing

Twenty-year-old forensic science student Nhat-Anh Tran was the victim of a fatal stabbing Tuesday. Her boyfriend, Loc Tran, was arrested Thursday on a charge of first-degree murder.

SEAN LAVIN
Staff Writer

UCF forensic science student Nhat-Anh Tran loved watching CSI. She dreamed about solving murder mysteries after she graduated.

But those dreams died Tuesday, when Tran became the victim of a deadly stabbing.

Loc Tran, 30, no relation to Nhat-Anh Tran, was arrested Thursday on a charge of first-degree murder in her death.

Investigators think Nhat-Anh Tran, known to friends as Anh, and Loc Tran were discussing the future of their relationship in her home near the Waterford Lakes area Monday night.

According to a 911 call at 8:21 a.m. Tuesday, Anh Tran's sisters, who lived with her, knocked on her door but got no response, said Cpl. Susan Soto of the Orange County Sheriff's Office.

"She's always been the strong one."

SISTER

They forced the door open and found Anh Tran and Loc Tran bleeding from stab wounds, according to Soto.

Loc Tran, whose stab wounds were said to be life-threatening, underwent surgery at Orlando Regional Medical Center, according to the sheriff's office. Anh Tran, 20, died at the scene.

Because there was no sign of forced entry from the outside, and because Anh Tran planned on ending the relationship, the sheriff's office said it was investigating the stabbings as a possible attempted murder-suicide.

"At this point, we've got no indication that there was a disturbance or a fight, any noise or anything to arouse [the roommates'] suspicion," said Jim Solomons of the Orange County Sheriff's office.

Anh Tran's sisters said she was more than just the 48th victim in what appears to be a record-breaking year for slayings in Orange County.

"She's a sister, and pretty much everybody's known her as the victim, and she's not just the victim," Anna Tran said. "If you look at her pictures, in every single one of them she's smiling and there's nothing fake at all. She's always been the strong one."

Loc Tran, who was arrested in 1998 on kidnapping charges, was a registered sex offender,

Stadium parking, traffic plans aired

ERIC GRIMMER
Staff Writer

Traffic management, parking plans and the protection of local residential neighborhoods from campus-stadium fans dominated the discussion between residents and officials at an open house Monday night.

"We're giving it our best shot to get this right the first time," said Gary Carlin, who represents PBS&J, an engineering firm that is aiding UCF officials in developing an efficient traffic management and parking program for the on-campus football stadium opening next fall.

Carlin, other representatives from PBS&J and UCF officials held an open house in the Art Gallery of the Visual Arts Building in hopes to answer questions and alleviate some concerns expressed by local residents and other interested individuals.

Once the final traffic management program goes into effect, which Carlin said will probably not occur until mid-way through the first football season, a combination of a traffic signal system, dynamic message signs and closed-circuit television will work to alleviate traffic congestion.

The traffic signal system would examine how traffic is functioning in the corridor surrounding UCF. It would then adjust the amount of green time in each cycle to the flow of traffic. The goal of the system is to

$2.5K reward in fire investigation

Classroom 1 blaze is considered the fourth arson in three months

NATALIE ZFAT
Variety Editor

More than a week after firefighters raced into the Classroom 1 building to extinguish a blaze that started in the men's restroom, Det. Juan Bailey of the State Fire Marshal's office has no leads.

"It might have been done as a prank," Bailey said after six days of investigating the fire he called an arson case. "But we don't have any suspects at this time."

The fire, which occurred about 4:50 p.m. Oct. 11 in the building, started when a wad of paper towels was set on fire in the men's restroom on the first floor.

Ten minutes later, four police cars, several fire trucks and a helicopter were at the scene. Although the overhead sprinklers came on and prevented any serious fire damage, Det. Jerry Hartsfield of the UCF Police Department said the extent of response vehicles was necessary.

"Any time you have a building that size, you want to respond with as many people as possible to make sure the building is evacuated and nobody else goes inside," he said.

Hartsfield, who was at the fire, is working in conjunction with the State Fire Marshal's office to catch the arsonist. He recently initiated a unique tactic he said he thinks might help speed up the case.

CHARLIE BENTON / CENTRAL FLORIDA FUTURE

Although the fire that started in a men's restroom in Classroom 1 on Oct. 11 set off overhead sprinklers and did not cause any serious damage, firefighters responded within 10 minutes.

"We posted a reward sign in the Classroom 1 building for $2,500," Hartsfield said.

"It works like Crimeline. You can call anonymously and if you help us convict this guy, you get the money." Helping police "convict this guy" means naming and directing them to the arsonist himself, Hartsfield said. "We're

Student receives scholarship from astronaut foundation

JAIME JOSHI
Contributing Writer

Computer engineering major Brian Becker was awarded a $10,000 scholarship by the Astronaut Scholarship Foundation on Tuesday.

Retired astronaut Robert Crippen, vice president of the foundation, presented the award.

"We at the Astronaut Scholarship Foundation are very, very concerned with the science and technology capabilities in the U.S.," Crippen said.

"That's why we're very pleased to get students like Brian here."

Becker said he planned to use the money to further his education at UCF, where he is participating in the design and programming of a self-navigating robot. Becker plans to eventually pursue a doctorate in robotics and artificial intelligence.

In addition to thanking his family and his adviser, Avelino J. Gonzalez, Becker also thanked Crippen.

"Thanks for presenting me with this oversized, uncashable check," Becker said with a smile.

"Although, it is showier than direct deposit."

Stressing the importance of a university education, Crippen spoke about America trailing the rest of the world when it comes to engineering.

"We used to be the leader in science and technology," he said. "Now, 40 percent of college graduates from China are engineers. In the U.S., it's only 5 percent."

"Currently, there are approximately 300,000 engineers from India. You can see that when you've got computer problems and call tech support. In the U.S., it's only 70,000."

The Astronaut Scholarship Foundation has made retaining America's leadership in science and technology a priority. Created in 1984 by the six surviving members of the original Mercury Seven astronauts, the foundation initially gave seven $1,000 scholarships.

Today, the foundation provides 18 $1,000 scholarships and has given UCF $133,000 in awards.

"UCF's been with us since the beginning," said Linn LeBlanc, executive director of the foundation. "If there's a strong graduate program, there's a strong undergraduate program."

Said Martin Dupuis, assistant dean of the Burnett Honors College: "The Astronaut Scholarship Foundation is a great organization. It encourages academic excellence and research, and it's more than just a big check. Students get the chance to network with great scientists and inventors."

ages academic excellence and research, and it's more than just a big check. Students get the chance to network with great scientists and inventors."

Crippen also shared anecdotes about his days as an astronaut, including his flight experiences with John Young.

"You have the John Young Parkway down here," he said. "Well, I remember talking to John about it and he said, 'They're not supposed to do things like that until you're dead. Someone's going to have an accident on that thing and sue me!'"

Having spent 565 hours in space and having seen the world from a different perspective, Crippen is as passionate about environmental issues as he is about space exploration. His experiences in space led to a greater involvement with the shuttle's environmental control system.

"When you're up there, you spend a lot of time looking out the window," he said. "This is a fantastic, beautiful planet we're living on and we need to take care of our environment."

Among local residents attending the presentation, was 87-year-old Ernestine Morrow. "I'm a firm believer in all of the philosophical thoughts that John Fitzgerald Kennedy had in his life," she said. "His dreams are the reason we've moved so far."

"That's why I'm excited to meet Crippen. The space program was John Kennedy's legacy."

Despite his love for space travel and exploration, Crippen said he doesn't see himself venturing into space.

"I'm hanging up my helmet," he said.

"I've seen some great things, but now, it's time to take things a little slower and enjoy myself."

Chinese envoy delivers message to North Korea as Rice tours Asia

BEIJING — A Chinese envoy met North Korean leader Kim Jong Il and delivered a personal message from President Hu Jintao on Thursday in the highest-level Chinese visit to its isolated ally since the North's nuclear test last week.

A North Korean general, meanwhile, told ABC News that Pyongyang's nuclear weapons were defensive only and would not be sold to third parties, but he added that war on the peninsula was inevitable if President Bush continues to ask the country to "kneel."

In response, White House press secretary Tony Snow, denied that the U.S. wanted the North to "kneel down," but was trying to offer them a "better deal. Better economy, more security, better relations with their neighbors, integration into the world economy as opposed to isolation."

"We right now are focused on using all of our efforts on a diplomatic path," Snow said.

The meeting with Kim by State Councilor Tang Jiaxuan came as Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice was making an Asian tour to push for cooperation in enforcing U.N. sanctions for the North's Oct. 9 blast amid signs that Pyongyang may be preparing a second atomic test.

She said the United States wants to lower tensions, not aggravate them.

"We want to leave open the path of negotiation. We don't want the crisis to escalate," Rice told reporters in Seoul.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Liu Jianchao said he had no details of the message conveyed by Tang in Pyongyang, but said Kim and the diplomat had "in-depth discussions" about the nuclear dispute. North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency said Tang also brought a gift for Kim but did not say what it was.

Priest says he went naked with Foley as boy, denies they had sex

ROME — An elderly priest acknowledged Thursday that he was naked in saunas with Mark Foley decades ago when the former congressman was a boy in Florida, but denied that the two had sex.

The Rev. Anthony Mercieca, 72, speaking by telephone from his home on the Maltese island of Gozo, said a report in the Sarasota Herald-Tribune about their encounters was "exaggerated."

"We were friends and trusted each other as brothers and loved each other as brothers," Mercieca said. Asked if their relationship was sexual in nature, the priest replied: "It wasn't."

His comments came after the Florida newspaper published a story on Thursday that quoted him as saying in an interview that he had an inappropriate two-year relationship with Foley in the 1960s that included massaging the boy in the nude.

HIGHER EDUCATION

What's in the news at colleges around the country

30 percent of Md. public school graduates need help in college

BALTIMORE — Thirty percent of Maryland's college freshmen who graduated with a college-prep education in a state high school were assigned to remedial classes, according to a study released Wednesday.

The Maryland Higher Education Commission said many of the students needing help in math or English attended four-year colleges. Most remediation takes place at community colleges.

Michael Keller, the commission's research director who wrote the report, said it followed 15,725 students who graduated from a public high school in 2004, took the SAT or ACT, and enrolled that year in a public or private college or university in Maryland.

The increase in remedial math students at four-year colleges occurred mostly at Maryland's historically black institutions, Keller said. At the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore, 17 percent of freshmen in 1999 had to brush up on math skills; in 2004, that figure was 49 percent. At Coppin State University, the jump was from 54 percent to 76 percent; at Morgan State University that figure increased from 24 percent to 38 percent.

Embattled professor's appeal delayed by funding dispute

BOULDER, Colo. — Univ. of Colorado professor Ward Churchill's battle to keep his job has been delayed by a dispute over whether the university is obligated to contribute $20,000 toward his defense.

Churchill, who angered many people with an essay that likened some Sept. 11 victims to a Nazi organizer of the Holocaust, faces dismissal on allegations of research misconduct, charges he denies.

He has appealed a recommendation by the acting head of the university's Boulder campus that he be fired.

Churchill maintains that Faculty Senate rule requires the university to contribute the $20,000 to help him fight dismissal. The university's governing Board of Regents has said it never accepted the rule and is not bound by it.

Churchill's attorney, David Lane, said he may file a lawsuit by next week in an effort to get the money.

A faculty committee hearing Churchill's appeal of the dismissal recommendation agreed to delay proceedings until Nov. 6 because of the dispute.

Churchill has been relieved of teaching and other academic duties, but is still being paid.

Gallaudet University postpones homecoming as protests continue

WASHINGTON — Gallaudet University postponed its homecoming Tuesday as protests over the school's incoming president stretched into a third week.

Classes resumed this week after a three-day shutdown at the end of last week when students blocked all campus entrances for three days. One gate reopened after 133 protesters were arrested Friday night.

A deadline for two additional side gates to reopen passed Tuesday morning without any action against the protesters.

But university President I. King Jordan said Tuesday that homecoming activities would be postponed because the university was "not operating under normal circumstances."

An overwhelming majority of the school's faculty voted Monday night to back hundreds of students demanding that Jane K. Fernandes resign as president designate or be removed. The faculty at the school of about 1,800 also voted no confidence in the Board of Trustees and Jordan.

Fernandes and the board insist that she will take office as scheduled in January.

Fernandes' opponents say she isn't open to different points of view and that the selection process did not reflect the student body's diversity.

But Fernandes, formerly Gallaudet's provost, has said some people do not consider her "deaf enough" to be president — a notion some students have rejected.

"The reporter talked to the priest four times yesterday and carefully reviewed his account, especially of the one night," Connelly said. "The story accurately reports what the priest said."

Saudi oil minister breaks silence to support OPEC's barrel cut

DOHA, Qatar — Saudi Arabia threw its support behind OPEC's proposed 1 million barrels-a-day production cut Thursday, giving a jolt to oil prices.

"We will try to make the market balanced," Saudi oil minister Ali Naimi said, ending two weeks of silence from the world's largest oil producing nation.

Naimi's statement came as the cartel's oil ministers gathered in the capital of Qatar for emergency talks on cutting output after a price decline of more than 25 percent since mid-July.

Saudi backing is considered to be critical among analysts who have doubted two weeks of rumors that there was consensus for an output cut within the often fractious Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

It was still unclear whether the cut will be made to OPEC's official production quota of 28 million barrels a day, or to its actual output, which is believed to be slightly below that level due to slackening demand.

Light sweet crude for November delivery rose 75 cents to $58.40 a barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Another OPEC official, speaking on condition of anonymity because he wasn't authorized to make announcements on behalf of the organization, said there was still no formal agreement, "especially on the details of such a cut."

Indeed, just how the 1 million barrels per day cut will be divvied up is also a contentious issue among OPEC countries that depend heavily on oil revenues. The proposed cut would take effect Nov. 1.

This would be the first time OPEC has trimmed its output since December 2004, when oil traded slightly above $40 a barrel and the cartel lowered its official production quota by 1 million barrels a day.

Kazakh official invites Sacha Baron Cohen to visit Kazakhstan

ALMATY, Kazakhstan — A top Kazakh official has an invitation for Sacha Baron Cohen, whose character, Borat, parodies a Kazakh journalist: Come visit.

Deputy Foreign Minister Rakhat Aliyev said in an interview that he understands why Kazakhs are unhappy about Cohen's character. But he told newspaper Kazakhstan Today that "we must have a sense of humor and respect other people's freedom of creativity."

"I'd like to invite Cohen here," he said. "He can discover a lot of things. Women drive cars, wine is made of grapes and Jews are free to go to synagogues."

Cohen's character has presented inhabitants of the ex-Soviet republic as addicted to horse urine, fond of shooting dogs, and viewing incest as a respectable tradition. Cohen's film, "Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan," will be released Nov. 3.

Kazakh officials have tried to respond to Cohen's depiction of their country.

The Foreign Ministry recently ran ads on CNN, in The New York Times, and in the International Herald Tribune citing facts and figures on the nation's economic growth, civil liberties and cultural achievements.

"It's useless to offend an artist and threaten to sue him," Aliyev was quoted as saying. "It will only further damage the country's reputation and make Borat even more popular."

Microsoft to officially release new Internet Explorer browser

REDMOND, Wash. — Microsoft Corp. is giving its Web browser software its first major upgrade in years, amid signs that Internet Explorer's market share is eroding.

The release late Wednesday brings Microsoft's browser more in line with competing products such as Opera Software ASA's Opera and Mozilla Corp.'s Firefox. Internet Explorer 7, or IE7, adds features such as tabbed browsing, which lets people open several Web pages without cluttering their desktop with multiple open browser windows.

Microsoft has been heavily testing the new browser, releasing five beta versions over 14 months, and has periodically offered security updates for IE6, first released in 2001.

Still, a lag of more than five years between official releases has cost the company.

Web analysis company WebSideStory estimates that Internet Explorer's U.S. market share is about 86 percent, while Firefox commands about 11 percent of the market and smaller offerings account for the rest. Two years ago, IE had about a 93 percent share.

Dean Hachamovitch, Microsoft's general manager for Internet Explorer, acknowledged the company could have done more sooner, but he said the new version should address users' concerns.

"We did have active development," he said. "The question is whether it was enough."

Family Weekend '06 to serve up fun, sun

LAUREN LAFRANTZ
Contributing Writer

UCF Family Weekend 2006 is here, so it's time to clean up those messy dorms because parents will be here before you know it.

Today through Sunday is the 3rd Annual Family Weekend. Each day, students and parents are invited to attend various events around campus.

Postcards were sent out to each freshman's home to inform their families of the events. Students were also notified by e-mail. It is recommended that families sign up for each event, but it's not required.

The Recreation and Wellness Center will be open to students and their families throughout the weekend, and A Knight Showcase in the Library will be open during the building's regular hours.

The first event will be held today from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Student Union. The Office of Student Involvement will serve light refreshments during its open house for students and parents.

The Lake Claire Community, along with Libra and Apollo communities, will also be hosting events today for their residents and their families.

Events for tonight include Late Knights' Gold Rush, where students and families can participate in activities such as pumpkin painting and dance lessons; they can even try out a mechanical bull. This event will begin at 9 p.m. and end at 2 a.m.

The Campus Activities Board is also hosting CAB Comedy presents Aaron Karo, which begins tonight at 9:30.

"I am looking forward to

- 9:30 p.m.

Aaron Karo, the comedian that CAB is bringing in as part of the event. He should be good," said Late Knights Operations Director Matthew Hughes. "Of course, I can't forget about the free food."

The students of Rosen College of Hospitality Management can have a night out with their families tonight too. Rosen is coordinating Rosen Idol where students can showcase their talent. This event begins at 6 p.m.

The entire weekend will be packed with events, the biggest one being the UCF football game on Saturday night. The UCF Alumni Association is organizing a tent party before the game where there will be a BBQ, giveaways, and special appearances by Knightro and the UCF cheerleaders.

First-year transfer student and psychology major, Corinne

Russell, is excited about family weekend.

"My mom was actually so excited that she planned [to come] this weekend and booked her hotel at Home-wood Suites, her 'home away from home,' about a month ago," Russell said. "So far, we are definitely taking advantage of the free weekend at the gym and leisure pool. On Saturday night, we are going to the game at the Citrus Bowl; we bought tickets that came with a pre-game tailgating barbecue. It will hopefully be a nice, relaxing weekend of fun in the sun and a little UCF spirit."

The weekend will wrap up on Sunday with the U Can Finish 5 miler and 2 miler. This event will benefit the Florida Children's Hospital. The event, which begins at 7:30 a.m., will likely attract hundreds of students, faculty, alumni and parents. The cost is $20-$30, and all of the proceeds will benefit the charity.

"The UCF campus is changing everyday," said Kelly Sparks, OSI Family Weekend coordinator. "Some families have not been back to campus since they brought their students here for their first day."

"Students should encourage their families to come back to campus and see what their students and UCF have been up to," OSI is anticipating "several thousand" families to attend this year, she said.

There are many other events happening this weekend. Most of the events are free and open to all, but there is a cost and age limit for some.

Game-day plans develop

FROM A1

"maximize green time and minimize delay," according to a PBS&J official. The system is already in use along International Drive near the Orange County Convention Center.

Until the system is finished, PBS&J will rely on static road signs directing fans to the stadium, as well as uniformed police officers to direct traffic, Carlin said.

Carlin talked about how they intend to handle parking on game days. He said ticket holders will be individually assigned to four specified lots on campus, which will be heavily monitored to ensure every vehicle is parked in their designated lot.

Though no final parking plan is in place, Carlin said it was a safe bet that fans like donors, boosters and season ticket holders would be assigned to the closest lots while single-game ticket holders would be forced to park in outer lots and take shuttle buses to the stadium.

PBS&J presented traffic diagrams depicting the recommended path fans should take to their designated lots, in an effort to ease traffic congestion even more. For example, fans parking in the outer lot are recommended to take State Road 408 into Research Parkway.

On game day, the road taking fans through Research Parkway will be a one-way road into campus. At halftime, the road will be flip-flopped into a one-way road off campus and back onto SR 408.

"Hopefully where they're going to park will dictate the way they get to the game," Carlin said.

PBS&J also wants to get more shuttle buses running between local apartment complexes and campus, and hopes to establish park-n-ride spots at local businesses, such as the Oviedo Marketplace mall, to reduce the number of fans parking on campus.

Gameday Management, an event transportation company that specializes in events such as the Super Bowl and Daytona 500, is a consultant to PBS&J on the project. GM also works Citrus Bowl events and football games.

"We currently act as a liaison between parking, law enforcement and the university," said Ann Crossland, senior project manager.

Crossland, heading up the consultation for GM, has been assisting PBS&J with the parking plan by attempting to "identify the needs of donors, students and fans, and weighing those needs with the options they have," Crossland said.

Residents were the most vocal in their concerns about protecting their neighborhoods around UCF, specifically those closest to the stadium entrance on McCulloch Road and Lockwood Boulevard, from fans looking for additional parking and areas to tailgate.

Plans are in the works to issue 2 or 3 parking hang tags to residents that live near the stadium.

On game days, Lockwood Boulevard will only be open to local traffic, and police will be stationed on McCulloch Road. Vehicles driving down Lockwood Boulevard to McCulloch Road must have a parking hang-tag to do so. All nonresidents' cars will be towed from residential neighborhoods.

Lt. Pete Keiting, traffic safety coordinator for the Seminole County Sheriff's Office, addressed neighborhood protection and tailgating concerns.

"It's still a work in progress," Keiting said, "but we've come a long way in the planning process."

Keiting is working with apartment complexes in Seminole County, such as Tivoli, Northgate Apartments and Riverwind Apartments, to "develop a strategy to maintain their residents and guests."

Keiting is advising that apartment management discourage open-lot tailgating and he wants to keep partying residents in their apartments prior to the game.

"They need to understand our law enforcement presence will certainly be enhanced," Keiting said.

Keiting summed up the message of PBS&J, the police department, and UCF officials by saying: "It's our job to get them into the game safely and out of the game safely."

really hoping the public will come forward."

Arson at UCF is nothing new. Wednesday's fire marked the fourth arson at UCF in three months.

Last month, hundreds of students and faculty were evacuated from the UCF Library after someone lit a newspaper on fire on the third floor. Nicolas Navarro, 21, a molecular and microbiology major, discovered the fire and was able to stomp it out. No suspect has been named in the case.

In July, student Matthew Robert Damsky lit a couch on fire at 3:15 a.m. on the second floor of Academic Village Apartment Building 110, causing another evacuation. During his explanation to Det. Paul Peterson, he said he "thought it would be a good way to meet girls."

Later that night, Damsky started a second fire on the first floor of the building.

Bailey, the state fire marshal's detective, maintains that there were no suspect connections between any of the arson cases.

"They have nothing in common other than the fact that they're [all] mindless crimes," Bailey said. "We're still looking for suspects."

Cpl. James Roop of the UCFPD, also working with the State Fire Marshal's office on the case, was optimistic that the arsonist will be found.

"We let the State Fire Marshal take the lead simply because it's their specialty," he said.

Murder suspect under guard in hospital

FROM A1

according to the Florida Department of Corrections Web site.

Anh Tran made it clear she intended to end her time-consuming relationship with Loc Tran in order to pursue her dream to work in forensics, Anna Tran said. "She was not going to let a guy ruin her dreams," Anna Tran said.

Early in the investigation, Orange County homicide detectives named Loc Tran as a person of interest. Forensics data, evidence collected at the scene, and information obtained from witnesses enabled investigators to obtain a warrant for Loc Tran's arrest. Loc Tran remains hospitalized and under guard until he is well enough to be transported to the Orange County jail, according to Solomons.

Anna Tran said her family members were "very angry" with Loc Tran. "Based on his record, pretty much everyone's come out against him," she said.

Anna Tran traveled to St. Petersburg on Tuesday with her older sister, Phuong Tran, to tell their father, who is ill, about Anh Tran's death.

"It took him a while to accept it," Anna Tran said. "It just seems so unreal to me."

Wednesday night, no one in the family had been able to gather the strength to tell Anh Tran's mother, who lives in Vietnam, all the details surrounding her daughter's death.

"She knows something bad happened," Anna Tran said.

She and her older sister plan to tell their mother all the details once she arrives in Orlando for the funeral.

Aside from juggling classes and a relationship with Loc Tran, Anh Tran also worked as a server with a close-knit group at the Hooters restaurant on Lake Underhill road.

In Vietnamese culture, it is customary to leave food, such as rice, near a photo of the deceased person to symbolize nourishment of the soul.

Employees at the restaurant, who were planning on celebrating Anh Tran's 21st birthday Nov. 4 in a party bus, in an event Anh Tran had billed as "The Asian Sensation," are reeling from her death.

"We're all very, very shocked," Hooters server Cara Messier said Tuesday night. "We all got together today and were talking about it and mourning."

Annia Villa, another server, added: "Anh was an amazing girl, smart, beautiful and full of spirit. She was the light of our lives. At work she would never fail to make us smile."

Hooters servers are working an extra shift on Anh Tran's birthday and pledging to donate all their tips that day to her funeral expenses.

A portion of the sign-up sheet reads: "I am sure she would look down and smile knowing that we all loved her dearly and wished to send her on a journey in the 'style' in which she came to us in."

UCF's Vietnamese American Student Association, of which Anh Tran was a member, plans to erect a memorial on campus in her honor. The group set up a table outside the Student Union on Thursday to collect money for the memorial and for Tran's family.

"A lot of people are really shocked because they didn't think this could happen to a friend," VASA member Ricky Ly said. "Everyone's just shocked. It's the loss of a friend — the loss of a really good friend."

treated for injuries to his right eye and the surrounding bone. A CT scan showed multiple skull fractures.

The facial bone damage, doctors told Wilgo, can be corrected only through reconstructive surgery. Surgeons will insert permanent metal pins to support Wilgo's facial bone structure.

Witnesses said the beating resulted from a verbal fight between women who were with Wilgo and women who were with the men who battered Wilgo.

"This guy started trouble with one of the girls I was with, and I had to step in," Wilgo said.

Wilgo said he was punched from the side, and then more men joined fight. "Suddenly there was more of them, and I just ran," said Wilgo.

Witnesses said that after he initially got away, Wilgo ducked and tried to protect himself from the attackers, one of whom told police he was dressed in costume as a "rock star" and another of whom said he was dressed as a blue-and-white "airplane."

After the beating, Wilgo lay unconscious in a pool of his own blood.

"I'm in so much pain right now — I have to take Percocet every few hours, and I can't go to class," he said.

Orange County Sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Carlos Torres said the case would likely be brought to trial, but the date is still to be determined.

"These kids will probably look back and say, 'Wow, that was a stupid decision,'" Wilgo said.

FAU falls in first loss in Sun Belt

Field goals push Ragin' Cajuns past Florida Atlantic

FORT LAUDERDALE — Drew Edmiston's two field goals were all Louisiana-Lafayette needed to defeat Florida Atlantic 6-0 Wednesday night.

Louisiana-Lafayette (4-2, 1-0 in Sun Belt Conference) won its fourth straight game.

Florida Atlantic (2-5, 1-1 in Sun Belt) lost for the first time in its last three games.

Florida Atlantic drove 55 yards on 11 plays on its final possession, but with two seconds left in the game a pass by quarterback Rusty Smith was broken up in the end zone by cornerback Michael Adams to seal the win.

Quarterback Jerry Babb was 11-for-21 for 84 yards and one interception for the Ragin' Cajuns. Tyrell Fenroy rushed for 87 yards on 18 carries.

Sean Clayton started at quarterback for Florida Atlantic and was 8-for-15 for 62 yards.

He was replaced during the third quarter by Smith, who finished 10-for-19 for 88 yards. Each Florida Atlantic quarterback threw an interception.

The Ragin' Cajuns broke a scoreless tie in the second quarter. A pass by Clayton was tipped by intended receiver Casey McGahee. Gerren Blount intercepted the pass and Louisiana-Lafayette had the ball at the Owls' 32-yard line.

Five plays later, Edmiston kicked a 44-yard field goal to put Louisiana-Lafayette ahead 3-0.

A five-play, 36-yard drive in the third quarter culminated in a 43-yard field goal by Edmiston that gave Louisiana-Lafayette a 6-0 lead.

Louisiana-Lafayette had a 49-yard punt return for a touchdown by Michael Adams midway through the fourth quarter called back due to a holding penalty.

Two starters doubtful for Jaguars

JACKSONVILLE — Jacksonville Jaguars wide receiver Matt Jones and defensive tackle Marcus Stroud could miss their second consecutive game on Sunday when the Jaguars travel to Houston to face the Texans.

Jones was listed as doubtful on Wednesday's injury report and did not take part in practice that day.

Jones suffered a groin injury on Oct. 1 against Washington and was inactive the following week against the Jets.

It was the first game in the second-year pro's career that he had missed after playing in his first 20 games. The Jaguars had their bye week on Sunday.

Jaguars coach Jack Del Rio indicated Wednesday that Stroud would be listed as questionable with an ankle/groin injury, but when the injury report came out later in the day, Stroud was categorized as doubtful.

Stroud missed the Jets on Oct. 18, ending a streak of 84 consecutive games that he had played, including a team-leading 68 consecutive starts.

Stroud is in his sixth season with the Jaguars and has been a starter in the Pro Bowl three consecutive years. He recorded 10 tackles in the first four games this season.

O'Leary: Intensity needed, team missing leadership

BRIAN MURPHY
Staff Writer

After the beat down that the UCF football team received Oct. 13, coach George O'Leary knew something had to change.

He said that he saw players not helping each other out, going through the motions and not taking responsibility for what happened on the field.

So on Sunday he decided to take things into his own hands, and called a team meeting.

"I addressed the team as a whole that the sense of urgency in football and the intensity in football needs to pick up," O'Leary said. "We have a lot of players back from last year, but what I see missing is leadership within the team itself. It's hard when you have a lot of seniors that aren't playing to get leadership."

O'Leary stressed the importance of leadership by referencing the biggest game in college football last week, the Florida Gators versus the Auburn did not play very well in the first half, but in the end, they found a way to pull out a win. After the game, when an Auburn player was asked how they were able to do it, he said that the seniors took over at halftime.

"That's how you get it done," O'Leary said. "That's how programs that win do it. You need stand-up people and we need more of our team."

GAME PREVIEW

Smarter play, fewer turnovers key for Golden Knights against Owls

ZACK MOORE
Staff Writer

The football season has gone from overly inflated expectations to cautious optimism that the Golden Knights could bounce back to explanations like, "see what had happened is."

But with all the negativity that surrounds the Knights, hope springs eternal. The game Friday night against Pittsburgh is over, thankfully, and in reality that game didn't mean that much.

Pittsburgh isn't a Conference USA opponent, so that loss, while damaging for bowl eligibility does nothing to hinder the Knights' opportunity for a chance to return to the C-USA championship game.

"We have one loss, as well as other teams in the East Division," senior offensive tackle Dan Veenstra said, "so we pretty much have control of our destiny."

"If we win out, hopefully we can be in the same position that we were last year: playing for a conference championship and going to a bowl game."

Saturday, Oct. 21 @ 4 p.m.

The Rice Owls, on the other hand, are a C-USA opponent and an upcoming team.

The Owls have gone from perennial doormats to a team that plays with extreme emotion since losing defensive back Dale Lloyd, who died Sept. 25 after collapsing on the practice field the day before.

The Owls will take the field on mates doing that.”

The Golden Knights have just 17 seniors on their roster and due to injuries, suspension and lineup changes, only five are currently starting.

Quarterback Steven Moffett is one of those five.

He has started every game this season, but there is a chance that he may be replaced this week as starter by junior Kyle Israel for Saturday's contest.

“I don't like to make changes in mid-season,” O'Leary said. “I don't think that is the right way to do things, but I am going to do whatever is best for my football team because it is a business to me. Are both perfect? No, but I am going to play the one that I think we have the best chance to win with.”

Whomever O'Leary decides to start, it is very clear that both will play against the Rice Owls.

When it comes to the schedule, the Owls (2-5, 1-2 in Conference USA) share some similarities with the Knights.

Rice has played a couple of national powers in Texas and Florida State and was crushed in both games by a combined score of 107-14.

And when it comes to competing against teams inside their own conference, they have had some nail-biters.

Two of Rice's three conference games were decided by a single point.

On Oct. 14, Rice recorded their first conference win with a last-second touchdown against the UAB Blazers, who entered the game atop the C-USA East Division.

With three seconds remaining, Rice quarterback Chase Clement found wide receiver Jarrett Dillard for a 9-yard, game-winning score. If the Knights hope to claim victory this Saturday, they will need to stop that duo.

Dillard is the reigning C-USA Offensive Player of the Week.

Against the Blazers, he hauled in nine passes for 111 yards and three touchdowns. Those three scores allowed Dillard, a sophomore, to set a Rice single-season record with 11 touchdown catches. And there are still five games in the regular season left for him to add to that total.

Dillard has caught a touchdown in nine consecutive games, the longest current streak in the country.

“You better know where he is at,” O'Leary said. “He has been very impressive on film. He has made some outstanding catches, tough catches where there have been people draped on him. I have been very impressed with him.”

On paper, Dillard facing the Knights' secondary looks like a huge mismatch.

He leads C-USA in catches, yards and touchdowns. Meanwhile, out of the 119 teams in Division I-A, the Knights rank top tacklers in H.B. Blades. He ended up wreaking havoc on UCF by making 10 tackles, forcing a fumble and recording a sack.

The Knights will have to deal with another game-changing linebacker this week in sophomore Brian Raines.

Raines leads C-USA with 50 solo tackles and is fourth in the nation with 71 tackles per game.

He also seems to step up for conference competition.

In three conference games this season, Raines made a combined 36 tackles, including a season-high 17 stops against the Houston Cougars.

To neutralize the Owls' strengths on defense, the Knights will need a strong game from their offensive line.

The early season struggles of the line have been well-publicized, but the group has improved lately. The Knights running game has turned in three straight 100-yard efforts.

Some of this may be due to the quality of the depth on the line. Cedric Gagne-Marcoux and L.J. Anderson, two starters from last season, have been replaced on the line by players like junior Dominic Ignelzi and senior Dan Veenstra.

“We have about seven or eight solid guys on the offensive line to keep everybody fresh,” Veenstra said. “We are going to use those guys in a good rotation, keep people fresh, focus on the running attack and that will open the passing game.”

Obviously, UCF's offense depends on the ability to run the ball, but that is difficult to accomplish when they are down by 28 points in the second quarter.

Yet all of the Knights are looking to the future. They know what happened Friday night, but they also know that loss did not have a huge effect on their season.

On Saturday, they will take the field knowing that with a win and some help, they could end the day in first place in the C-USA East Division.

With everything that has transpired during the Knights' season, from the Gainesville shutout, the Pittsburgh pounding and a pair of games that slipped away on the final drive, the Knights still have the privilege of controlling their own destiny.

“We have a six-game season left as far as the conference season is concerned,” O'Leary said. “Everything that we set for goals — winning the division and getting to a bowl game — is still out there.”

The Owls and Knights face off on Saturday at 4 p.m. at the Citrus Bowl.

Last week against the Blazers, Clement's passing yardage fell below 200, but he compensated for that by rushing for a career-high 141 yards.

Last week, the Knights faced off against one of the nation's

Consistent kick return vital for UCF offense

FROM A7

Saturday with a chip on their shoulder, and the Knights will have to be ready for an emotionally charged squad.

When the Knights have the ball ...
Limit penalties and turnovers

It's easy to single out a one-on-one match-up each game that could play a pivotal role, but the Knights' offense has been shooting itself in the foot as of late.

It seemed each time the offense would start to march down the field against Pittsburgh, the offense would search for a way to stop any momentum they had.

Whether it was the three fumbles or the one interception, the Knights' offense has gone from not turning the ball over in their first few games to making turnovers a routine.

“We just can't turn over the ball like we were,” Veenstra said. “Anytime you have that many turnovers, it is hard to focus on the run because you are coming from behind, so we really didn't have the opportunity to go in and do what we like to do.”

Along with the turnovers the Knights need to limit the mental mistakes that have been slowing their drives.

The Knights have a tendency to make a nice first down gain, to have the play nullified for a holding penalty or some other mental mistake that puts their offense in first-and-long, and then ultimately third-and-long.

The offense only managed to convert six of their 14 third-down attempts against Pittsburgh, compared to the 10-of-12 the Panthers managed.

When the Owls have the ball ...

UCF defensive back Joe Burnett vs. Rice wide receiver Jarrett Dillard

In the past, the Owls have been primarily a wish-bone offense. Running the option and relying on the pass only in distance situations.

But the Owls have found a gem in Dillard, a sophomore from San Antonio.

So far this season Dillard has 53 catches for 683 yards and 11 touchdowns. While he is only 5-11, he goes up and makes the tough catches and has the ability to break away from a defense and find the end zone.

“Rice has an outstanding receiver No. 81 in Dillard, who really has been impressive on film,” UCF coach George O'Leary said.

“He makes a lot of tough catches against pretty good coverage. He is one you have to be aware of.”

The Knights will rely on Burnett to blanket Dillard. With Dillard's speed, there are few defensive backs that can run with him. Burnett will have to be able to keep up with as he runs up and down the field trying to find any opening to make a play.

Special Teams ...

UCF Kick return vs. Owls Kick coverage

Common sense says the Knights' kick coverage should be under the microscope. But the squad hasn't done too badly. They are only allowing 22.3 yards a return, and that includes the opening kickoff that Pittsburgh returned for a touchdown.

The Knights' kick return unit is where the focus needs to be, not for lack of production though. The Knights were able to average 25.2 yards a return against the Panthers, with a long return of 59 yards by junior Curtis Francis.

If the return team is able to continually put the offense in good situations on the field and provide good field position, it will be key to an offense that has been struggling in the recently.

Final words ...

The Knights enter a six-game stretch that will be the key to their season.

The next six games are all against C-USA opponents and will determine if last year was a fluke or the building block that so many believed it was.

O'Leary preaches to his team that each game is a new season, and this game will be for the Knights' season.

If they once again enter the Citrus Bowl and lay another egg on the field, any hope or optimism will be gone.

The Knights need to start this game fast and jump on top of the Owls from the first kickoff and not relent until the game is over.

Boston probable for Florida State

FROM A7

sprained left ankle and is expected to miss three weeks, the team said Wednesday.

Wright is expected to spend one week in a cast, then two more weeks rehabbing.

He said he wasn't sure when the injury occurred, but that he noticed the ankle started swelling about three hours after the Heat beat the New Orleans/Oklahoma City Hornets 109-105 in an exhibition game Tuesday night.

Wright started that game and finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds, drawing high marks from coach Pat Riley.

The Heat has four preseason games left before opening the regular season at home against Chicago Oct. 31.

Injury situation improves for Seminoles

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State defensive lineman Alex Boston has been upgraded to probable for Saturday's Atlantic Coast Conference game against No. 22 Boston College.

Boston has been hampered by a left ankle sprain, which he originally sustained during preseason practice and aggravated in Florida State's blowout win over Duke last Saturday, forcing him out of practice this week.

“I hope he is OK by Saturday,” coach Bobby Bowden said. “He did not do much today, but he has played with it before. We are hoping to save him for the game.”

The junior played at defensive end for his first two seasons as a Seminole and started the first two games this year on the end. He then moved over to nose guard after starter Paul Griffin and Emmanuel Dunbar went down with injuries.

Boston's back up, Letroy Guion, also expects to play on Saturday against Boston College (5-1, 2-1 ACC) for the Seminoles (4-2, 2-2 ACC).

Guion injured his left shoulder against Duke, but an MRI revealed that there was no ligament damage.

Starting cornerback Tony Carter was able to practice on Wednesday.

“Tony worked some today,” Bowden said. “Tony has a chance (to play).”

Both starting linebacker Eugene Hayes and tight end Brandon Warren missed practice again Wednesday, and remain doubtful for Saturday's game.

Vick added to Dolphins' roster

DAVIE — Marcus Vick was summoned to the team offices Tuesday and told he was being added to the roster after spending the first six weeks of the season on the practice squad.

This week's roster move means Vick might make his NFL debut Sunday when Miami (1-5) plays the Green Bay Packers (1-4).

He'll be a reserve receiver and kick returner following a turbulent career as a quarterback at Virginia Tech.

The Dolphins certainly need a spark to reverse their disappointing start. They've scored eight touchdowns and have yet to exceed 17 points in any game.

Karen O, lead singer of the Yeah Yeah Yeahs, screams, strips and seduces a full house at the Hard Rock Live last Friday. Fans chanted along to her notably racy lyrics.

Sporting a purple and green translucent dress, a yellow and purple leotard, and black leggings lacking the entire inner thigh, Karen O, lead singer of the Yeah Yeah Yeahs, left nothing to the imagination as she taught the crowd a thing or two about her wild edge.

Friday the 13th was no ordinary night. While young teenagers bounced around to extremely racy lyrics, long time fans were left confused and a little perturbed.

"The venue should have an age limit to shows, especially with the explicit sexual content that they project," diehard fan Marybeth Thornburg said. "Also, the younger part of the crowd probably hasn't even been fans since their first album Yeah Yeah Yeahs."

As Karen O stripped off her dress to reveal her body suit, the entire crowd dove even further into the raw sex-driven madness that electrified the Hard Rock Live that night.

A sexual persona flowed continuously throughout the set with songs from both the Yeah Yeah Yeahs' old and new albums, including Date with Night, Dudley, and of course their hit song "Maps."

Ranging from ripped fishnets with bullet-studded belts to old T-shirts and baggy jeans, the band made everyone crave the sexual energy. The sex appeal was so thick that it even seemed to put the audience into slight submission, a much different feel from the usual Hard Rock expectation of crowd surfing and intense mosh pits.

The set lasted just under an hour, as most Yeah Yeah Yeahs songs kick at two minutes. Most of the fans yelled along with the words and never broke eye contact with the sheer passion that was occurring 20 feet in front of them. It just goes to show that even if a girl has on a bumble-bee-colored jumpsuit and has a bowl haircut with makeup that

CD REVIEW

Robert Randolph
fills CD with colorAMANDA K. SHAPIRO
Staff Writer

My roommate's car is on fire in a field somewhere. My rent is due. I've got a 25-page paper to write, and I've got somewhere to be in 15 minutes.

But right now, in the few moments before my personal apocalypse, I've somehow managed to realize that Robert Randolph's new album is playing in the background.

Suddenly, nothing else matters.

Randolph is a musical genius. Last week, he and the Family Band released Colorblind, its second studio album, but third in the catalog of the band's musical career.

It also quite possibly marked one of the most eclectic, innovative compilations of music to grace the charts this year. The album ranked No. 7 last week on Park Avenue Junior's Top 10 list.

As a pedal steel guitar player, Randolph got his bearings in Orange, New Jersey. The church background is evident, with the back up vocals forcing listeners to question if they are sitting in a southern Baptist church at some points during the album.

Although each artist in the project is incredibly talented, the music is heavily group-influenced, making the band shine as one powerful entity.

The record features appearances by Dave Matthews, Eric Clapton and Leela James — artists whose reputations speak for themselves.

The funk and R&B vibe on Colorblind is accompanied by vibrant guitar harmonies to produce polished jam sessions. Fans of Gnarls Barkley's assorted style and Carlos Santana's virtuosic guitar capabilities will enjoy this album.

My favorite picks are "Homecoming" and "Ain't Nothing Wrong With That." These tracks sound like the output of an updated Sly and the Family Stone. Be sure to catch the bonus track "Do Yourself a Favor." The song's title says it all.

The band will hit Atlanta on Oct. 26 with Ryan Shaw. That's the closest you'll come to seeing Robert Randolph and the Family Band live.

The Open Door, Evanescence's follow up to its 2003 Grammy-winning album, debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard charts last week, selling 447,000 copies.

Guitarist Terry Balsamo co-wrote the album with singer and piano player Amy Lee. Balsamo, originally of the rock group Cold, entered Evanescence in late 2003 after the departure of guitarist Ben Moody. After filling in for Moody at an American Music Awards performance, Balsamo joined full time.

Lee and Balsamo began working together in 2004 on songs that would soon make up The Open Door. The duo worked in 2-3 week increments, writing and recording ideas on the computer software Pro Tools at Lee's Los Angeles home.

"[We wrote] one song at a time," Balsamo said Saturday during a telephone interview from Milwaukee. "There were some times where we would have a verse or a chorus and then work on it here and there, [but] we never had any set way of doing anything. It was always up in the air."

On some songs Lee presented vocal and piano ideas first, Balsamo said, then he added guitar and bass. However, for the song "Cloud Nine," which took the most time to write, it was the opposite.

"We had the [drum] loops and the beats first, and then [Lee] came up with the vocal lines, and then I came up with the riffs and the bass. I had never worked like that before; usually it's always guitar first, then vocals," he said.

Although Balsamo joined the band in the midst of Fallen's success, he said he felt no pressure when it came time to deliver an album that was an accurate representation of the band's progression, and that he and Lee were confident in themselves during the creation process.

In fact, Balsamo said it was around the time they wrote "The Only One" when the album began to click.

"I think that was like the fourth or fifth song we had written and ... we were just really excited. I think we kind of knew we were on to something with that song," he said.

Balsamo said they rarely encountered writer's block while working on the record and it never took more than a month to complete a song.

However, after about a year of writing in L.A., it seemed like

Rock 'n' roll bar bares all

Howl at the Moon a charm for anyone who's not afraid to let go

NATALIE ZFAT
Variety Editor

If you enjoy fine dining, relaxing music and a soothing atmosphere, steer clear of this place.

Howl at the Moon, a rock 'n' roll piano bar located on International Drive in downtown Orlando, prides itself on being "the most fun you can have with your clothes on." And sometimes, that rule doesn't even apply.

"I've seen it all," said Jeff Bolen, sales and event manager at the Moon. "Last week, a man came in celebrating his 81st birthday with a walker, and before you knew it, he's doing Jell-O shots."

The bar, which offers a free hot dog and taco buffet on Friday evenings, draws a crowd of over 400 most nights. Anyone who's 21 and up can attend, but most people who go consider themselves connoisseurs of live music.

"We have a full band on stage each night to accompany the [two] pianists," Bolen said. The band plays a variety of instruments, from accordion and sax to drums and guitar.

Remarkably, each member of the six-person band can play any instrument, most songs, and rag on any person in the room if they choose to.

Joe Genuardi, the national entertainment director for the Moon, is one such musician.

"We play everything," Genuardi said. "We do anything from South Park to the Beatles, to a Madonna song we rap the words to."

The songs played are based off of requests that people jot down, attach to dollar bills, and slip into fishbowls placed on the on-stage pianos.

Sometimes, the musicians change the words of songs to play on current events.

During one particular performance of Abba's "Dancing Queen," the band opted to sing, "See that girl, watch that scene, keep her away from Marc Foley."

Every song or two, Genuardi will call on someone in the audience to come up to the stage. Sometimes he asks a group of adults to dance. Other times he forces them to sing.

One request, however, is the wildest of them all — Genuardi's request to spin the wheel of destiny.

The wheel, a circular dry-erase plank adorned with phrases such as "Funnel a Beer" and "Take a Body Shot," forces attendees to perform the action the wheel lands on.

Sometimes it's a lot easier said than done.

Barbara Ann, who celebrated her 22nd birthday at the Moon last week, revealed that her destiny was to funnel a beer on-stage. Although she was fussy at first, — "I don't drink beer," the freckle-faced female said — Genuardi knew he could make it happen.

"I've got a special song for Barbara Ann," he told a crowd of over 500. And without delay, he began to play the opening notes of the '60s Beach Boys hit "Barbara Ann."

Within seconds, the funnel was drained.

"One of the skills of the gig is getting people to do things they wouldn't normally do. We rely on the fact that people get crazy," Genuardi said.

Amid the wheel, Genuardi said the craziest thing people do is the "Ice Bath" — when a girl gets a bucket of ice poured down her shirt and a guy gets one down his pants, all of course, on a stage for hundreds to see.

"Their reactions are the best part. I could never do it," he said.

Genuardi, who calls the venue a "low-attention-span theatre" because "there's a million things going on," said that the Orlando Howl at the Moon is one of 11 locations in the country. Moon exists everywhere from Chicago to Cleveland.

Genuardi also said that with the recent addition of their free 100-person parties, which can be applied for in-store or online at <http://www.myspace.com/howl>, college student attendance has been at an all time high.

"Pretty much anyone who signs up gets a free party," he said. "Tell all your friends."

Senior Matt Rossen can vouch for that.

"It was easy," Rossen said. "I showed up at my friend's happy hour party and ended up getting my own free party."

The parties, held on Friday nights, allow a winner to come to Howl with 100 friends for free. Each person is given their first two drinks for 50 cents each, and has unlimited access to the infamous taco and hot dog buffet.

According to Bolen, the promotion is an attempt to widen the audience of Howl at the Moon and keep its doors open to the college-aged population.

"We put on one of the craziest shows I've ever seen. And I guarantee if a student comes once, they'll be back," he said.

Guitarist and Amy Lee co-write latest album

FROM A10

time to relocate. Balsamo and Lee rented a house in his hometown of Jacksonville. That relocation ultimately spawned what would become the album's first single, "Call Me When You're Sober."

"It was funny, because Amy [had] the piano line — the chords that open up the song — and she never did anything [with them]," Balsamo said.

According to Balsamo, Lee decided to record the piano piece on Pro Tools using a keyboard.

"She kept [playing] and it kept getting stuck in my head, and I kept listening to it over and over. And then, all of a sudden, that riff that comes in next, just kind of came to me," he said.

As with Fallen, many string arrangements appear on The Open Door, with the addition of various gothic and choral overtures. Balsamo said the strings are an intricate part of Evanescence's sound, but many of the arrangements came after a song's completion.

"That was something that was always in the back of our minds, but we would never actually write a song and worry about [arrangements]," he said.

According to Balsamo, there is no significance to The Open Door's particular track listing, but originally, there were plans to connect each song so the album would continuously flow from start to finish.

But that idea had to be nixed when Balsamo suffered a stroke in November, two days after he finished recording the guitar tracks for the album.

Now, nearly one year later, Balsamo said he is feeling good, but still has paralysis in his left hand and arm. He has since overcome his doctors' original prognosis.

"A couple of my doctors told me that I wouldn't be able to play guitar again. But here I am on tour, playing guitar every night," he said.

Although Evanescence won't hit Florida on its current tour, Balsamo said the band should return when it embarks on another tour in January 2007.

The Open Door is available through Wind-up Records.

Band rocks harder than ever before

looks like she walked out of a David Bowie music video, she can still rock.

Three songs in, makeup was dripping down Karen O's face as if her eyes were bleeding to display the pure insanity that everyone was experiencing.

The entire band seemed to gain a boost of self-confidence, as in previous performances, such as the Fever to Tell tour, Karen O did not expose her eyes during the entire course of the concert.

Leaping around stage, dragging her body on the floor, screaming and spinning like a top, her emotions were now conveyed 10-fold, creating a shattering stage presence.

The same can not be said for the opening band, Deer Hunter. After their first few songs, the lead singer re-emerged on stage wearing a sleeveless t-shirt that read "I am not anorexic." This of course was an obvious plea to get immediate reactions.

As soon as Hunter exited the stage, the audience pushed toward the front of the venue in anticipation of being close to the upcoming lunacy fringe.

Lead singer Karen O puts her all into her latest Hard Rock Live performance.

Little Richard performs after food frenzy

FROM A9

Here's to one of the only places in the world where you can sample food and wine from 27 countries and never once have to change locations.

The Festival occupies Walt Disney World's Epcot theme park for six weeks.

The magic began Sept. 29 and ends Nov. 12. During this time, tens of thousands of people flock to Orlando to treat themselves to the ultimate in worldly cuisine sampling.

It all starts in Scandinavia with the Norwegian Meatballs and Cauliflower Cheese Mashed Potatoes. Folks can stick around for a Lingonberry Mousse or head to South Africa for Bobotie, a traditional Cape Malay beef casserole.

If up for the challenge, guests can advance to Italy and have Eggplant Timbale with Pasta & Ricotta, or try their Pizza all Salsiccia, Sicilian pizza with sausage. No one should leave without the Zeppole Fritte al Cioccolato, a fried pastry with chocolate cream filling and powdered sugar on top.

Perhaps the best part is all of these delicious foods are priced $2-$4.50 each. That gives a patron's wallet room to try foods from dozens of other places, like the Grilled Beef Sirloin in Argentina. Prepared medium with a garlic-glazed Chimichurri sauce, this meat goes well with the El Portillo Cabernet Sauvignon wine.

"I can't breathe," said Matthew McLaren of Palo Alto, CA., after two helpings. "I'm so full, but I still want more."

Also worth saving room for is the Vegetable Curry with Basmati Rice in India. Paired with a Coconut Rice Pudding for dessert, the total comes to $4 and stomachs want to kiss the chef.

Speaking of chefs, all of the foods and wines prepared at the Epcot Food and Wine Festival are carefully researched and prepared by regional chefs from all over the world. Disney sommeliers also work the entire year to ensure the best food and wine pairings possible.

Last, but certainly not least, is the Festival's music artist lineup. The Food and Wine concert series, held each night at the American Gardens Theater, includes performances by musical legends Little Richard, The Beach Boys, The Family Stone Experience and Gloria Gaynor.

On Wednesday, Little Richard played for a packed pavilion of fans who cradled Greek salads and plates of Canadian Maple Glazed Salmon in their laps as they waited for the '60s rock pioneer to perform.

"Did you like that Geico commercial?" he asked an audience of thousands. "I barely understood it."

The 74-year old superstar rocked the house in a purple diamond-studded suit that resembled the likes of a bathing parrot. His set included several of his biggest hits — "Good Golly, Miss Molly," and

"Lucille" — and one song that halfway through, he confessed he made up on the spot.

"You like this one?" he asked the shrieking crowd. "Good. Cause I just made it up."

Halfway through the show, a teenager in basketball shorts jumped onto the stage and Little Richard's security guards nearly jumped out of their skins, especially when Little Richard shoed the guards away.

The young man whispered something to Little Richard that was inaudible to the audience, except for the word "inspiration." A lot of ooh-ahing followed, and Little Richard asked his brother to come on stage and bring the young man an autographed book.

Saul Hipburn, 30, could not care less.

"That's all fine and good," he muttered to his wife, "But I'm not leaving before he plays 'Tutti-Frutti'."

Lucky for Hipburn, that was Little Richard's closing song.
